sorry I can't reproduce it. can you tell which steps need to be followed to reproduce it.

- Are you working in the page module (templavoila?) or in the workspace module?
- On which icon do you click?

I tested with current trunk

#2 - 2010-08-09 14:35 - Michael Elzer

- Login as administrator or as a user who has access to more than one workspace and the live-environment
 - Choose a workspace (problem appears on all of our workspaces)
 - Change to view "Web > Page"
- Click on the title of the page (to get a overview of the content on the right side)

The error-message should appear now.

If a user has only access to one workspace, the problem does not appear.

We don't use templavoila.

Addition:

If a Page has no translation, the first translation of this page in another workspace works fine and no error message appears. All additional translation of this same page in another workspace ends in the error message.

It looks as if the error appears only when a translation was created in another workspace. Pages who are completed/translated and do not appear in any workspace work fine and no error-message is displayed.

sorry, still not reproducible.

#5 - 2010-08-11 17:06 - Georg Ringer

To Reproduce:

- 1) Requirements: 2+ WS, 2+ languages
- 2) Create a page in Live WS
- 3) Create one translation in WS #1
- 4) Switch to WS #2 > Errir

Should be fixable by making the function `exec_languageQuery` in `db_layout.php` workspaces aware.

Anyone able to reproduce it atm (running 4.6beta)?

#9 - 2011-08-30 15:49 - Christian Buelter

I could reproduce this with the TYPO3 introduction package 4.5.5:

1. Switch to a workspace.
2. Create a language page overlay.
3. Create a text element on that page in the new language.
4. Switch back to live workspace.
5. Open the page using the "page" module in the backend.
