Subject:	Remove deprecated methods with deprecation log from core for 4.6

Description

Beginning with 4.5 we can systematically remove old deprecated stuff from the core. As a first step I wanted to remove the obvious.
This RFC removes all methods which:

- are deprecated since 4.3 or earlier
- have a deprecation log
- are not in use anymore anywhere in the core

There are also methods which are deprecated but don't have deprecation log. IMHO we shouldn't simply remove them even if they were targeted for removal in 4.5. They should get deprecation logs (another RFC) and removal should be postponed to 4.7 for them.

Deprecated classes like gzip_encode should produce a deprecation log entry via constructor and also be removed in 4.7
(issue imported from #M14883)

History

Noticed that the class gzip_encode already had a deprecation log in the constructor. So it can be safely removed.

#2 - 2010-08-30 14:56 - Sebastian Michaelsen

Won't be done for 4.5 because of its LTS. Can be closed

#3 - 2010-08-30 15:04 - Chris topher

Resolved, no change required (for now).

This has been postponed to 4.6, because 4.5 with Long Term Support should not break anything.

Thanks for the update!
