Subject:	After #23766: New layout and labels for tt_content show palette labels without content
Description
After #23766 palette labels are displayed, although there is no option in the palette. So you see a palette "headline", but no option below. This does not make sense; remove the palette label in that case! See screenshot. (issue imported from #M16065)

Actually these are not section headers but palette labels.

16031 just makes use of default TCA syntax, that already offered labels for palettes by using this code:

```
--palette--;Title,

So if this doesn't work, it must be a core bug that just hasn't been noticed before, since there were no palettes using labels in the default TCA.

Hi Christopher - thanks for updating the description.

IMHO the whole palette should just be skipped when there are no visible fields available, This will remove the label and the surrounding containers then.

I will take care of that while working on the labels for pages and tt_content.

But I guess we should make it a separate RFC,. since it is about PHP code of tceforms and not just TCA settings.

I tracked it down to the palette "item" --linebreak--

If there is a --linebreak-- left after removing excluded fields, the palette still gets rendered, since "count($parts) will still be true.

Attached patch solves this problem by checking if $parts contains only --linebreak-- item(s) and removing the palette completely as well for this case.
