Affected Flow version: FLOW3 1.0.0
Subject:	Exception with / @MappedSuperclass */
Description
If you have a mapped superclass in Domain/Model folder you will have an exception unless you mark the class with @entity Doctrine2 Examples http://www.doctrine-project.org/docs/orm/2.0/en/reference/inheritance-mapping.html dont mark this kind of classes as @entity Not sure if it's better to mark as entity, may be yes, but it doesnt seem necessary in Doctrine2. All works ok and no new table is created in DB after tag as @entity #1295973082 No class schema found for "F3\Sifpe\Domain\Model\Apunte" RuntimeException thrown in file /var/www/html/FLOW3/Data/Temporary/Development/Cache/Code/FLOW3_Object_Classes/F3_FLOW3_Persistence_Doctrine_Mapping_Driver_Flow3AnnotationDriver_Original.php in line 89.

[BUGFIX] Hint at possible exception cause

When using @MappedSuperclass without @Entity an exception is thrown.
Since FLOW3 needs the @Entity annotation even with a mapped superclass, this change adds a hint to the exception message.

Yes, in FLOW3 all entities must be marked as such. The entity declaration has more significance than only for persistence, thus simply using MappedSuperclass as a "shortcut" to Entity is not an option.

But I will change the exception message to contain a hint.
