Subject:	It is impossible to use the Collection interface in "type hints"
Description

Currently it is not possible to use the Collection interface for @param or @var annotations, because the TypeHandling doesn't consider it a valid collection type. For the sake of decoupling it should be possible to do so, though.

[BUGFIX] Allow use of the Collection interface in "type hints"

In type hints as well as @var and @param annotations it is better to use the Collection interface instead of concrete implementations like ArrayCollection. This was not possible so far.

This changes makes it possible to use Collection instead. When FLOW3 has to create an instance for Collection, it will create an ArrayCollection.

Ok, I didn't realize we had this one when creating #29419 - refer to that one for actual progress on this issue.

Why was this one closed?

Edit: it seems stupid as I ask this, after having seemingly closed this issue myself. I did not, here is what happened: I commented on and closed #27825, only to come back here and see it closed and with the same comment as well. Go figure...
