Has patch:	No
Complexity:
Subject:	Configurable Redirects
Description
We need a new Entity "Redirect" (in MVC/Web/Routing/Redirect) with the properties sourceUri, destinationUri, hasMoved statusCode and possibly counter and host. Before a request is matched to package, controller and action, the router should check if a redirect is configured and return the respective redirect headers if that's the case.

[FEATURE] Add tagging to router cache

This adjusts the RouterCachingService to tag every Routing cache entry with any UUID the routeValues/matchResult contain.

This will make it possible to flush caches only for affected entities.

Additional idea:

ObjectPathMappings can be marked obsolet (triggered when an affected object is changed for instance)

Whenever the IdentityRoutePart comes across an obsolete mapping while resolving an URI, the path segment will be recreated and - if it's different to the one in the repository - a redirect is created.

If an obsolete mapping is found during matching of an URI, the mapping is removed and a redirect with status "gone" created.

For that we could introduce some new annotation that triggers an AOP aspect which updates related ObjectPathMapping records whenever all or specific properties of an object change
