Subject:	Only show data-* attributes when logged in to TYPO3
Description

The ContentElementWrapping service is adding the data-* attributes to the content elements, without checking if someone is logged in to TYPO3.

This is a problem as it doubles the size of the HTML output, and might be a security risk. We should hide these data attributes when the site is not editable.

[TASK] Hide data-* attributes in website frontend

The data-* attributes on DOM elements are not needed outside the backend context, so they should not be visible for a normal website visitor (and thus minimalizing the HTML source size).
