TYPO3.Fluid - Bug # 37543

Status:	Closed	Priority:	Must have
Author:	Michel Albers	Category:	ViewHelpers
Created:	2012-05-28	Assigned To:	Bastian Waidelich
Updated:	2013-08-14	Due date:

Has patch:	No
Affected Flow version:	FLOW3 1.1.0 beta 1
Subject:	Additional __identity field when using TYPO3.Media

Description
When using a <f:form.upload /> field for uploading a TYPO3.Media Image, FLUID adds a hidden *_identity field for the Image which results in an "*_identity mapping is not allowed" exception when saving the record. Removing the hidden __identity field by deleting $content .= $this->renderAdditionalIdentityFields(); from FormViewHelper.php on line 127 solves the particular problem. Some further if / else conditions are needed.

I'll take care of that; the solution you proposed is just a workaround unfortunately.

#3 - 2012-05-30 12:57 - Karsten Dambekalns

Still getting the error "it's not allowed to map property __identity" when submitting the upload form with a previously set value. Sorry :/

Two remarks from my point of view (using 1.1 rc2 and TYPO3.Media) to probably make things clearer:
1. The problem only emerges when editing/updating an existing content (or whatever element) having a TYPO3.Media image as property (i. e. in newly created form there's no _identity hidden field for the image created)
2. I can confirm Michel's comment, that the suggested patch does not change anything (it's already part of rc2). The hidden field's still there, e. g.
<input type="hidden" name="content[image][_identity]" value="11db8fa6-71ad-4f89-a0d3-e75c4c545412" />. Removing it from the HTML output before submitting the form leads to a correctly updated image.
