Subject:	TCEforms: Replace "field has changed" icon with CSS class
Description
When editing a record in TCEforms, each field that is modified gets an arrow symbol in front of the input/select field. There are certain downsides to this: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- Having images and hard-coded srcs in each field clutters the HTML and has ugly JS to change the field, plus it's hard to style- This does not work for FlexForms The solution adds a generic TCEforms jQuery object that hooks into the existing fieldChanged function, and does the replacement through CSS classes. The CSS classes now, according to current design standards, just adds a border around the modified image.

[TASK] FormEngine: "field has changed" icon via CSS

When editing a record in FormEngine, each field that is modified gets an arrow symbol in front of the input/select field.

There are certain downsides to this implementation:

- Having images and hard-coded srcs in each field clutters the HTML and has ugly JS to change the field
- it's hard to style / exchange the icon

The new solution does the replacement via CSS classes.

The CSS class just adds a blue background to the changed form field or does a color change to the checkbox label currently.
