Has patch:	No
Complexity:
Subject:	Allow rendering of links without csrf protection token

Description

Currently there is no way to render a link without a token when authenticated even if the action you link to is available without authentication. This prevents to create useful links for emails or also TYPO3 Phoenix.

[FEATURE] Provide flag for disabling link protection in UriBuilder

This introduces a new flag for the UriBuilder which allows to configure if a link built by the UriBuilder may be modified by some security mechanism or not. FLOW3's CSRF protection mechanism now considers this flag.

By disabling link protection, it is now possible on a per-link basis, to generate a link without CSRF protection tokens for cases when it's clear that links are public.

This patch also removes the CSRF protection of links used in ExtDirect services. This needs to be re-implemented in the ExtJS package.
