Subject:	Rename 'Vendor' to 'Libraries'

Description

In accordance with our 'naming should make sense' principle, it has been discussed to call the standard composer directory 'Vendor' something else.

The reason is that even though 'Vendor' is kind of industry standard for the placement of 3rd party packages, The TYPO3-Flow (and related) packages are actually 3rd party in relation to the locally installed project, and the consistent thing would then be to put all those packages in the 'Vendor' dir as well.

Using the word 'Libraries' is thus more meaningful in the context, and since we are not following standard Composer directory-structure anyway, it is not really breaking any conventions.
