Subject:	Add delete-button in filelist module

Description
I often get asked by my editors (400+) where the "delete file"-button is in the filelist module. Naturally I tell them to use the delete option in the file context menu. But it just seems odd to me that there is no delete button next to the already visible buttons to the right of the filename for renaming or copying a file, etc. This would be a small but important step towards better usability. (This might also be a reason why my editors rarely delete their files, and my fileadmin directory has grown to 50GB.) Is there a reason that this button is hidden away or can someone or an extension implement it?

Revision 3053d0e0 - 2013-03-24 10:29 - Benjamin Mack

[FEATURE] Add delete button in file list

Currently it is not possible to delete a file or folder in the file list. Additionally, there is translation and error handling missing. The patch adds the trash icon to the file list (if the user has the right) and adds error and success messages.

Releases: 6.1, 6.0
Resolves: #44288

If you are talking about TYPO3 6.0: There is a patch already for that problem, see issue #42294.

#2 - 2013-01-09 15:49 - Andreas Wolf

- Status changed from New to Accepted

I think this is a bug (for 4.7 we won't implement new features anyways), so if it is fixed, it should be fixed in all supported versions.

There is a patch already for this in #42294. Why don't you review that one instead of providing one yourself?

Your patch here is for master, which means 6.x anyway - so there is absolutely no need to duplicate the other issue.
