[BUGFIX] Adjust YAML schemas to latest changes

the CLI command `./flow configuration:validate` currently reports invalid configuration for type "Settings" and "Objects" due to outdated schema files.

This adjust respective schemas to recent Flow changes.

- File composer.lock added

I still get the following errors on a fresh composer based installation:

`./flow configuration:validate --type Objects...1 errors were found: - TYPO3.Flow.TYPO3\Flow\Session\SessionInterface.factoryMethodName -> This property is not allowed here, check the spelling if you think it belongs here.`

`./flow configuration:validate --type Settings...5 errors were found: - TYPO3.Flow.session -> Property PhpSession is required -`

`TYPO3.Flow.session.name -> This property is not allowed here, check the spelling if you think it belongs here. -`

`TYPO3.Flow.session.garbageCollectionProbability -> This property is not allowed here, check the spelling if you think it belongs here. -`

`TYPO3.Flow.session.cookie -> This property is not allowed here, check the spelling if you think it belongs here. -`

`TYPO3.Flow.error.exceptionHandler.defaultRenderingOptions -> This property is not allowed here, check the spelling if you think it belongs here.`

What should I do to solve this messages?

Cheers,

Mick

Those are exactly the errors that this patch should fix. Are you sure you have the latest version including 911e281962d0c2312d0718daa29a8c8d44bce064 ?

For some reason I got an previous version of Flow by installing a fresh instance using composer.

However, I run composer update and validated the settings again - the configuration is valid!
