Subject:	New IRRE parent-child-structures are not removed
Description

If creating new records on a workspace, a placeholder record will be created and overlayed by a specific version. Removing the parent record does not remove the dependent 1:n children which leads to warnings on removing translations and recreating them afterwards (since child records are not really removed, but lost their parent reference).

The fix is to process placeholders on removing after references have been removed.
Currently it's the other way round which leads to the situation that parents just lost their children.
