Description

Product Management / Team Coordination

- Target Audience: team / general public

Responsible: Robert Lemke
Amount: 15 work days
Version: must have for 1.0

Description

The team and contributor's efforts need to be coordinated with the end user and overall concept in mind in order to not end up with a patch work solution of individual components glued together. This work package is about spending a day per week for the product management and communication with those working on specific features.

Depending on how much communication and coordination is necessary, some part of the weekly day can additionally be used for related tasks, such as communicating the current state and roadmap or improving the Neos website.

Goal

- establish a day per week where the project lead is available for questions regarding the feature set, possible impediments or technical decisions
 - keep an eye on the consistency and overall user experience and communicate findings and possible measurements to the team
 - discuss feature details through hangouts / chats / email and create feature descriptions / stories / wireframes

Deliverables

- a brief summary of what happened product / feature wise, which will be included into the monthly team report
- a maintained product backlog with prioritized stories
- decisions / conclusions from meetings with individuals are communicated to the mailing list

Summary (also posted to http://forum.typo3.org/index.php/t/196862/):

Originally I planned to establish a regular day (each week) to work on coordination which would allow team members to approach me with certain questions etc. But as it turned out, there were too many urgent tasks in the way and at that time it was also difficult schedule such a day. The team does, however, plan to establish a bi-weakly feature / issue discussion meeting for the near future.

In agreement with the team and Sebastian, I also used some of the hours for tasks which weren't strictly about coordination: we experienced a few blocking issues and were confronted with a way too long list of pending reviews which made me push in a few review and debugging sessions which, without this budget, I wouldn't have been able to do.

I also went through the (at that time) 327 mostly feature and task issues for Neos, but couldn't fit in a full review and prioritization of them until today since priorities also shifted slightly during the Neos sprint in Karlsruhe. Christian and Aske were a great help as they also went through the issues and Aske coordinated mosts of the UI related tasks during the sprint.

The last third of the budget mostly went into coordination and discussing features, concepts and tasks regarding Neos and then into planning and communicating an updated team structure [1].

As a conclusion I am (and also think that the team is) quite happy with what could be produced and pushed with this work package. It wasn't strictly used according to its definition but instead I focussed on the tasks which I think had the highest impact.

For the future we definitely need a new budget, not necessarily targeted to my person but rather a general budget dedicated to the ever-growing amount of organizational and nobody-wants-to-do tasks (like reviews). At the moment we are in a situation where more money will clearly be able to buy more time from most members of the Neos team.
