Subject:	Unnecessary requirement for \Image implementation in ImageService and ImageVariant
Description
Hi, when implementing the ImageInterface, you probably do that to use the viewhelpers from Media package. Due to a little oddity, this doesn't work right now. The constructor of the ImageVariant requires a concrete implementation of \TYPO3\Media\Domain\Model\Image and so does the transformImage method in the ImageService. This makes it pretty much impossible to have your own image model without duplicating almost the entire media package. As far as I can oversee it, this can be fixed pretty easily by setting the required type to the interface instead of the implementation. I've attached a patch that does that.

[TASK] Replace tight Image coupling with ImageInterface

This replaces occurrences of unnecessary tight Image type hints with the more loose ImageInterface.

Besides, some minor code beautifications are made.
