Subject:	Backend interface color distinction
Description
It could be useful to have the possibility to change a visible color in the backend ui between development, staging and production sites.

Maybe the background of the search bar would be a good place to provide that indicator so that we don't have to deal with changing the styling of all elements. to provide adequate contrast and usability.

The initial idea was to be able to use some kind of wallpaper in the top of the backend ui, but this will not work with the UI design. So it will possible just be a colored line in the top instead which can be set to a specific color.
