Ben already has an account for the TYPO3 Facebook and Twitter accounts and added me to those.

We will discuss the general approach on monday 27th (may) 4.30 pm.

The documentation at bufferapp sounds a bit different than it really is. It's not 10 $ per month for the whole account but 10 $ per month for every team member which will be added to an account. This won't work out for us and Ben will talk to them and find out whether we will find a possibility to use it.

Protocol coordination team meeting 6/6/2013

Berit discussed with Ben how we can make our social media accounts (Twitter ...) team capable. Buffer (<http://bufferapp.com>) looks cool, but unfortunately costs $10 per user - which would be too expensive if we'd like all active contributors be able to participate.

Solution might be a custom script / application which our contributors can use which posts team member's tweets.

Robert plans to integrate Tweet / Facebook / ... post functionality into the Neos blog in mid-term anyway. It might make sense to create a Flow-based Twitter package (with scheduling support) which we could then use for the team.

Next step: as a quick solution we will share one account + password for a Buffer account for those who really need / want to post today already.
