Subject:	Check for host before connect to database

Description
On Windows system a database connection with an empty host is possible and a link is returned. We have to add a check for empty hostname otherwise an installation of TYPO3 isn't possible.

[BUGFIX] Install tool uses empty database settings

Some systems allow to connect with empty username / password configuration to the database. Although this is not wrong the install tool should always ask for database credentials for new installations.
This patch prevents the install tool from setting an empty username and password as default values without manually submitting the form.

Tested current master with a standard xampp on Windows. Still same behaviour. But instead of checking for an empty host IMHO it's better to tune the install wizard
