TYPO3.Neos - Bug # 53330

Subject:	Renaming site root node throws Exception
Description

When you try to rename the site root node in the sites administration you will get an Exception:

> #1364290748: Invalid node name "My new site name" (a node name must only contain characters, numbers and the "-" sign).

Reason for this is that the site name is used for the new node name instead of the node name.

Additinally it would be nicer when the user gets a validation error and no Exception when he uses an invalid node name.

Revision 1562addb - 2014-01-06 10:41 - Alexander Stehlik

[BUGFIX] Correctly rename site root nodes

When renaming the ``site root node`` via the Sites management module the site name was incorrectly used for setting the new root node name instead of the specified node name.

This change fixes this by mapping the new node name only to the site when it has been changed.
Besides this cleans up SiteController, Site and the Edit form.

I have the same problem with launchr.com

http://v0107966a.launchr.com/@user-admin.html

An error occurred while trying to call TYPO3\Neos\Controller\Frontend\NodeController->showAction(). Error for node: Could not convert array to Node object because the node "/sites/neosdemotypo3org/home" does not exist.

Hi Alexander,

can you please confirm that this issue still occurs to you in Neos 1.0?

I just tried to reproduce this, but I get a validation error as expected:

(The error message needs some styling apparently)

Did you try it with a valid node name? This is when the error occurs.

#6 - 2013-12-11 19:48 - Alexander Stehlik

Sorry, forgot to mention that the error also occurs in the current master.

Thanks for testing :)

Ah good point, I didn't try that ;)

Thanks for reporting, I'll take care of this asap!
