Subject:	Make workspace name its identifier
Description
The name property of the Workspace domain model is marked Flow\Identity forcing it to be unique. But the corresponding db table still contains a @persistence_object_identifier column. Instead I'd suggest to add the @ORM\Id annotation turning the name to the workspace identifier. This would require us to create a custom migration which is probably not so trivial as usual doctrine migrations.. But I think it would be worth it as this would bring some nice benefits: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- Better readability in the database (instead of "d4564fa1-6e7e-ac9b-2f38-95dff812566e" the workspace column of a nodedata record would contain "live" or "user-admin" etc)- automatic property mapping: Even with https://review.typo3.org/#/c/25141/ we still use the "workspace name" in our javascript code. With this change "workspaceName" could be replaced with "workspace" there because a name would transparently be mapped to the corresponding instance in actions

[!!!][TASK] Use workspace name as identifier

This patch changes the Workspace to use the name as technical identifier and removes the ``persistence_object_identifier``.

Additionally it introduces a database index on ``workspace`` and ``path``.

This is only breaking if you have a relation to the Workspace model in your own models. In this case you must add a database migration to change your relation to use the name instead.
