Subject:	Installer does not display fatal errors that lead to extension check
Description
When something breaks in the install tool - like update classes for example - the installer redirects you to the loaded extensions check. You have absolutely no clue why this happens. On my machine an outdated devlog version caused the fatal as it tried to access the protected property TYPO3\CMS\Core\Database\DatabaseConnection::$link. A box with the fatal that caused the check should be showed.

[BUGFIX] Display detected fatal in extension check

In the installer fatals can happen during updates of very outdated extensions. Many updates can lead to a redirect to the extension check where the user gets displayed a message that a fatal has been detected. But the detected fatal error itself is not displayed.

This patch passes the error as url parameter to the extension check and displays it there.
