Subject:	New option for cache clearing
Description
New option
options.clearCache.system
If this option is set, the non-admin user is able to clear the system cache.
Note: It should not be necessary to do so for a normal user.
Clearing the system caches will impose a very large delay for the first load.

Christian apparently had some issues making this work, so I checked.

In fact adding only:

options.clearCache.system = 1
```

to a user's TSconfig does not work. You need to also set at least options.clearCache.pages or options.clearCache.all for the clear cache menu to show up at all. So this works:

```
options.clearCache.all = 1
options.clearCache.system = 1

I would say that this is a TYPO3 bug, but I would need to dig a bit more into the code to be sure whether this is a desired behaviour or not.

In the meantime, you can go ahead and document this property anyway.

It's definitely a Core bug. I'll create a patch.

The Core bug has been fixed and the labels have been improved.

The following will probably help in documenting this new property correctly (and note that the description of clearCache.pages and clearCache.all may need to be updated too):
