Subject:	Template-module: Creating new template doesn't show up immediately

Description

When in the template-module and there is no template on the current page, you have the choice to create a template (tested with "Create template for a new site"). The frame refreshes but still offers the same buttons - although it created the template. If for example you click again in the page-tree you see the template show up that you just created.

(Experienced this in 6.3-dev. I don't know yet what other releases this affects.)
