Subject:	Create encryption hash if none was defined

Description

Currently you'll get an exception if you didn't define an encryption hash:

    #1258991855: You must configure an encryption key for the HashService

Most people won't see this message though because there's a default encryption key defined in the Base distibution. A bad idea, because many people will just leave it like it is.

Therefore we should:

- not provide a default encryption key
- let the HashService generate a random key if none exists and save it into the global Settings.yaml file

Revision 8c77d74a - 2010-04-28 15:34 - Robert Lemke

[~TASK] FLOW3 (Core): The Bootstrap will now accept only "Production" or "Development" as valid contexts because this is how we currently use FLOW3. As soon as we really now how we want to support additional contexts, we can make it more flexible again. As a side effect, FLOW3 won't complain about missing context directories in the global Configuration dir.
[~TASK] FLOW3 (Security): Set a default encryption key for the time being until automatic generation is implemented. Relates to #7516
