Subject:	Instead of OK/Cancel buttons, use Commit?
Description	To me, it is not yet clear how the OK/Cancel buttons (shown when editing page properties) play together with the "Commit"-feature when you edit content. There are several possibilities I think: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>- After pressing "OK", the changes are on the live site</li><li>- After pressing "OK", the change still needs to be committed.</li><li>- get rid of the OK/cancel buttons altogether and instead display the "commit" button like when editing content</li></ul> The same issue occurs when deleting a page: Is it still needed to commit this change?

As discussed via Skype in the Daily Scrum:

- NEVER, push something to the live site >> Everything need to be committed through a workflow process
- Remove the "OK/cancel" BTN for all Properties dialogs >> Use Version Comment Dialogs instead!
- Hide the Dialog by clicking to the Content Frame below or any Menu Icon
